With less than one week until the start of a new fiscal year, the 35th Legislature has begun the work needed to ensure government departments and agencies have access to funding for the next 12 months. On Wednesday, the Committee on Budget, Appropriations, and Finance met to begin approving the raft of pending appropriation bills totalling approximately $1,100,000,000.?

Wednesday's meeting followed significant "clean-up work," reported the committee's chair, Sen. Donna Frett-Gregory. "We've put in a lot of work in the FY2025 budget," she said. She lamented that while the executive budget sent down to the Legislature was delivered on time, it "required a lot of work.”

“The projections that came to us were very aggressive and not necessarily in line with what we've seen historically or... with our current conditions,” Senator Frett-Gregory noted. She expressed disappointment in the decision by the Office of Management and Budget to reduce funding for “some very important programs that were vital.” Youth and the elderly, in particular, were at risk of losing access to critical initiatives, something which Frett-Gregory said her fellow lawmakers refused to accept. “We kept the faith with our community in this process by adding back the youth and elderly programs that were reduced significantly in the executive budget.”?

Some examples include the About Face program, managed by the Virgin Islands National Guard, and left unfunded in the executive budget. Lawmakers, however, programmed in an appropriation to ensure that the program can remain active for another year. Meals on Wheels is another — the Legislature intervened after learning of the financial challenges embattling the program. Frett-Gregory explained that a line item was added to the Department of Human Services’ budget to allow for the purchase of two new vehicles, and the hiring of two new staff members. These additional resources are expected to keep the program afloat and ensure continued access to federal funds.?

Cognizant that DHS is “responsible for the most vulnerable amongst us,” the Legislature has restored its budget “to the extent possible to ensure that we are able to provide social services in our community,” she said.

Of particular note is new legislation to establish a special revolving fund worth $250,000 to reimburse veterans who must travel to the mainland for medical care not available within the Caribbean region. “Stateside travel at least twice a year will now be included for our veterans,” Ms. Frett-Gregory beamed. The money will also support burial costs for deceased veterans.

“We ensured that we were able to keep as many positions in the FY2025 budget as possible,” said Frett-Gregory. To do so, special line items for vacancies and associated fringe benefits were included so “agencies can prioritize their hiring needs.”

The $75 million settlement from the JP Morgan case funds several critical non-profit organizations, while the Department of Education will receive a $3.5 million increase in its utility budget for a total of $8.5 million - “their real cost of electricity in 2024.”

The approval of budget bills and their ascension to the Committee on Rules on Judiciary began on Wednesday and will continue on Thursday.
