Adamo Performs in Trinidad.

Virgin Islands-born international soca artist Adam O has officially launched The Garden Tour, a self-funded initiative carried out in partnership with versatile band, Blind Earz. The tour aims to reconnect with the artist's core supporters and deliver a live experience grounded in musicality and personal connection.

Without backing from major sponsors or corporate partnerships, Adam O is financing the tour independently. He described the effort as a way to return to the people and places that helped him rise from his Virgin Islands roots to international recognition. “This tour isn’t about algorithms or trends,” Adam O said. “It’s about feeding the souls of people who crave real music, real energy, and real connection. Myself and Blind Earz wanted to give the world the best of who we are, on our own terms.”

Blind Earz, the band supporting Adam O, is described by him as “one of the most talented bands to emerge from the Virgin Islands.” Together, they are presenting a live performance experience designed to showcase their full capabilities.

To support the tour, the team recorded and released a 29-minute live performance. The video is available on YouTube and across major streaming platforms and is intended to give fans a preview of the full live experience.

The Garden Tour began on March 21, 2025, in Orlando, Florida. Additional tour stops include Atlanta, Georgia on June 21 and New York on June 22. More dates will be announced.

According to Adam O, the tour represents a personal mission to demonstrate that support comes from the people. “At the end of the day, we’re not chasing moments; we’re building memories,” he said. “We hope this live experience speaks to those who yearn for more than just a catchy TikTok trend and provides nourishment for the soul through our musicality and purpose.”
