JetBlue Airways has announced a significant expansion of its route map, introducing new destinations, restoring past service, and increasing frequencies in key leisure markets — including a boost to daily winter service between Boston and St. Thomas beginning in December 2025.

The enhancements, now open for booking at jetblue.com, include the airline’s first-ever service to Vero Beach, Florida, and the return of flights to Daytona Beach. Both cities will be served from Boston Logan International Airport (BOS) and New York's John F. Kennedy International Airport (JFK) starting in December 2025.

JetBlue will also expand international service from Florida to the Dominican Republic, and from Boston to multiple Caribbean and Latin American destinations. The moves strengthen the airline's Boston and New York focus cities and deepen its presence in the Florida market.

“Florida continues to be a place JetBlue's unique combination of low fares and great service resonates, and we're proud to grow our footprint with these new destinations to meet customer demand for more of the Sunshine State,” said Dave Jehn, JetBlue's vice president, network planning and airline partnerships. “Whether it's customers in the Northeast looking for a warm getaway or Floridians traveling north, we're excited to bring more choices and better service to these markets.”

Expanded Winter Service to St. Thomas and the Caribbean

Beginning December 18, 2025, JetBlue will increase its Boston-to-St. Thomas (STT) flights to a daily schedule. The airline will also launch daily service from Boston to Liberia, Costa Rica (LIR), St. Maarten (SXM), and Nassau, Bahamas (NAS). Seasonal second Saturday flights will be added to Grand Cayman, Cayman Islands (GCM) starting December 20, 2025, and Bridgetown, Barbados (BGI) beginning January 10, 2026.

JetBlue says these changes will make it the largest carrier from Boston to Florida and the Caribbean this winter, with nearly double the seats to Florida and almost four times the flights to Latin America and the Caribbean compared to its nearest competitor.

Florida Expansion and New Routes

From December 4, 2025, Daytona Beach (DAB) will receive one daily year-round flight from both Boston and New York, with introductory one-way fares starting at $59. Vero Beach (VRB) will join the network on December 11, 2025, with one daily year-round flight from both Boston and New York, starting at $69 one-way.

Additional Florida service includes new flights from Tampa (TPA) to Punta Cana, Dominican Republic (PUJ) starting December 18, 2025, with one daily year-round departure, and from Fort Lauderdale (FLL) to Santiago de los Caballeros (STI) beginning December 13, 2025, as a daily seasonal service running through January 19, 2026.

Long Island MacArthur Airport (ISP) will see seasonal service to Tampa four times weekly beginning December 19, 2025, and to Fort Myers (RSW) three times weekly beginning December 18, 2025, with introductory one-way fares starting at $49.
