

logo not found or type unknown

Schneider Hospital CEO Tina Comissiong Earns Prestigious FACHE® Credential, Joining Global Healthcare Leadership Elite

Tina M. Comissiong, CEO of Schneider Regional Medical Center, earns the FACHE® credential from ACHE, joining fewer than 20% of members worldwide recognized for excellence in healthcare leadership, lifelong learning, and advancing community health.

Health / Published On August 22, 2025 06:32 PM /

Staff Consortium August 22, 2025

Image not found or type unknown

Schneider Regional Medical Center Chief Executive Officer Tina M. Comissiong.

Schneider Regional Medical Center (SRMC) announced that Chief Executive Officer Tina M. Comissiong has earned Fellow status in the American College of Healthcare Executives (ACHE), receiving the distinguished FACHE® credential.

The credential is widely regarded as the gold standard in board certification for healthcare management, recognizing mastery in healthcare leadership, a commitment to lifelong learning, and dedication to improving community health. Less than 20 percent of ACHE members worldwide hold the credential, placing Commissiong among an elite group of healthcare leaders.

“I am honored to join the ranks of accomplished healthcare executives who have earned the FACHE credential,” said Commissiong, who is also an attorney and holds a master’s degree in public administration. “I am committed to advancing SRMC’s mission of delivering high-quality, compassionate care, and to continuing my professional growth as a healthcare leader.”

ACHE is an international professional society with a membership of more than 51,000 executives, focused on advancing excellence in healthcare leadership. The organization provides networking, education, career development, and public policy programs through its 76 chapters worldwide. It is known for its Healthcare Executive magazine, its publishing division ACHE Learn, and its annual Congress on Healthcare Leadership, which draws more than 7,000 healthcare leaders from around the globe.

© Viconsortium 2026