

The Virgin Islands Consortium

Vehicle Set on Fire at Kingshill Post Office; Mail Delays Possible on St. Croix

A vehicle was set on fire on the grounds of the Kingshill Post Office around 4 a.m. Thursday after being hoisted on a jack. No one was inside. The fire is expected to affect early-morning postal operations and may delay mail movement today on St. Croix.

Community Center / Published On August 20, 2026 07:05 AM /

Staff Consortium August 20, 2026

A vehicle burns inside the Kingshill Post Office gates on St. Croix early Thursday. No one was inside, and the incident may disrupt postal truck runs and mail dispatches.

ST. CROIX — A vehicle was set on fire on the grounds of the Kingshill Post Office around 4 a.m. Thursday. No one was inside the vehicle.

The Consortium has learned that the vehicle had been brought onto the post office grounds and hoisted on a jack before it was set on fire. A photograph from the scene shows the vehicle burning behind the closed entrance gate.

The fire is expected to affect early-morning postal operations at Kingshill, including the movement of postal trucks and mail dispatches.

As a result, mail movement and delivery on St. Croix may experience delays Thursday. Postal personnel were working to resume normal operations as soon as possible.

© Viconsortium 2026