LIAT's commercial passenger services will remain suspended until 30th June 2020, due to the continued impact of the COVID-19 pandemic, the company has announced.

LIAT Chief Executive Officer, Julie Reifer-Jones reported that some territories have announced a reopening date, there are still many protocols to be implemented, such as testing and mandatory quarantine periods, which will allow for the safe movement of passengers. She noted that the airline is closely monitoring the situation across the LIAT network and will resume flights when it is safe for passengers to do so.

Passengers booked during the extended period of suspension will automatically have their bookings cancelled and will receive full airline credit for future travel, the carrier said. Passengers will be able to rebook as soon as the airline announces the resumption of passenger services.

Mrs. Reifer-Jones reassured the public that the airline was continuing its planning for the resumption of operations. She noted however that there was still a great deal of uncertainty about the date of reopening of most borders. The airline said it has maintained strict protocols for its aircraft cleaning and sanitisation to ensure the health and safety of its passengers and staff.

LIAT acknowledged that this was an extremely difficult time for the region and its own staff and passengers. The CEO reassured that LIAT is still committed to keeping the region connected especially after this crisis.
