

The Virgin Islands Consortium

FEMA PSA: Do Not Cut Downed Telephone Lines

Community Center / Published On September 15, 2017 11:10 AM /

Staff September 15, 2017

As cleanup continues from Hurricane Irma in the Virgin Islands, residents are asked to avoid cutting downed telephone lines, if possible. Companies working to restore service say downed lines may still be energized and may still be providing service -- even if they are hanging or on the ground. If at all possible during your cleanup work, please don't cut the lines -- as it will delay the recovery effort.

As cleanup continues from Hurricane Irma in the Virgin Islands, residents are asked to avoid cutting downed telephone lines, if possible. Companies working to restore service say downed lines may still be energized and may still be providing service -- even if they are hanging or on the ground. If at all possible during your cleanup work, please don't cut the lines -- as it will delay the recovery effort.

