ST. CROIX -- In an effort to assist individuals in the territory to take charge of their health, the Department of Health in collaboration with the New York State Nursing Association and the Virgin Islands State Nurses Association, will be providing mobile medical clinics in various communities on each island. Doctors, nurse practitioners, and nurses, will be present to provide prevention and healthcare services. Flu and Tetanus vaccinations will also be available, D.O.H. said.

A variation of medical mobile vans and tents will be used to provide these essential services. Michelle Davis, D.O.H. commissioner, said, "I'm very pleased with the collaboration of public and private partners to provide needed health services to the VI
