

The Virgin Islands Consortium

Do Not Dispose Of Household Hazardous Waste Until Further Notice, Says EPA

Community Center / Published On March 20, 2018 07:50 PM /

Staff March 20, 2018

The U.S. Environmental Protection Agency has ended collection of household hazardous waste in the U.S. Virgin Islands. FEMA and EPA is asking residents not to drop off these items until suitable collection points can be established. This includes used oil, paint, household cleaners and solvents, TVs and computers.

The U.S. Environmental Protection Agency has ended collection of household hazardous waste in the U.S. Virgin Islands. FEMA and EPA is asking residents not to drop off these items until suitable collection points can be established. This includes used oil, paint, household cleaners and solvents, TVs and computers.

