Saint Lucia on Oct. 9 was featured during the 108th National Day celebrations of Taiwan.

In observance of Taiwan's double-ten day, a 14-member contingent—including Prime Minister Allen Chastanet—visited Taiwan to participate in the festivities. During the National Day parade, Saint Lucian students studying in Taiwan portrayed Saint Lucia's customs and culture.

“This year, professional dancers from Saint Lucia will be leading students studying in Taiwan in our National Day parade,” Taiwan President Tsai Ing-wen said. “Their performance will highlight our close friendship and our determination to pursue a brighter future together.”

Mr. Chastanet congratulated the government and people of Taiwan on its 108th National Day.

“A celebration for Taiwan is a celebration for Saint Lucia,” he said. “Taiwan is a strong and resilient nation. Our people wish you all the best as you continue to seek to make your mark in the world.”

Taiwan’s National Day celebrations was streamed live via the National Television Network.
