Governor Bryan will leave the U.S. Virgin Islands today and return on November 4, Government House has made known.

The territory's leader, according to Government House, is headed to Washington, D.C. for a series of meetings with various agencies and entities. The trip is rescheduled from Mr. Bryan's trip to Washington in September, when he returned to the territory in advance of Tropical Storm Karen, according to the release.

While he's away, Lt. Governor Tregenza Roach will serve as the territory's chief executive.
