WTJX said Wednesday it will be sharing educational programming on its television and web platforms available to parents and teachers to supplement the virtual learning curriculum for students in pre-K through 3rd grade.

“I’m very concerned for our youngest students and their parents as they navigate a virtual learning environment,” stated Tanya-Marie Singh, WTJX CEO. “Fortunately, WTJX has a wealth of educational children’s programming that is aligned to the Common Core curriculum and available via television and on our website.”

For a complete look at the WTJX-TV lineup, visit <https://www.wtjx.org/tv-schedule> or pick up a copy of WTJX's monthly programming guide, Take Twelve. To request a digital copy of our Take Twelve programming guide, email Dino Fontaine at dfontaine@wtjx.org.

Don't have a TV? You can still access WTJX's educational programming through the PBS Kids 24/7 Channel on your computer, smartphone, or tablet by visiting <https://pbskids.org/video/livetv> or by downloading the PBS Kids app, according to the release.

WTJX is available on the DISH Network on Channel 12. Channel 12 and the Kids channel, Channel 91, are available on Viya Cable TV. Additionally, all WTJX channels are available to all, free of charge, with an antenna. If you're having issues receiving the channels by antenna, contact Eunell Maduro at (340) 690-7298.
