A plane belonging to the airline Sea Flight was forced to perform an emergency landing in waters between St. Croix and St. Thomas following problems the aircraft experienced, though what exactly caused the emergency landing remained unclear as of Thursday morning.

According to the Virgin Islands Territorial Emergency Management Agency, at about 9:029 a.m. today the 911 emergency call center was notified of the Sea Flight #394SF aircraft, which had landed on waters between St. Croix and St. Thomas.

VITEMA said the passengers — seven in total — appeared safe. The passengers were being transported to St. Thomas for further evaluation by emergency personnel. The flight landed two miles off of St. Thomas.
