Responding officers found “one black male” slumped over on the front passenger seat of an SUV. Emergency Medical Technicians found no signs of life.

Two other men were at the emergency room of Schneider Regional Medical Center with gunshot injuries, however 21-year old Taheem Monsanto succumbed to his injuries while being treated.

The identity of the man in the SUV is being withheld pending notification of next of kin.

St. Thomas-St. John District Police Chief Steven Phillips called on the community to help expose individuals terrorizing the USVI. "This violence has to stop right now," the chief said forcefully. "We are seeing a recent uptick of gun violence, especially in St. Thomas." The chief said the investigation is in its early stages and that all leads were being followed, but he noted that such incidents can be solved swiftly and criminals brought to justice if the community shares information with law enforcement. "We don't have information at this time so please come forward, be the guardians of the community. Let's do our best to curtail this gun violence; we are our brother's keepers."

The chief added, "Although we are doing our best to take guns off the street, we're still seeing random acts of violence."
